LURIE SIMMONS

For her green gold, diamond and sapphire camera, the artist drew inspiration from her mother's own charm bracelet

WANGECHI MUTU

New York-based Kenyan artist Mutu's green gold, rock crystal and printed resin charm explores themes of immigration and identity

SHIRIN NESHAT

This green gold hand, complete with rock crystal and emeralds, is the Iranian-born artist's first foray into jewellery

MICKALENE THOMAS

The rhinestone-encrusted lips in Thomas' paintings inspired her green gold pout, complete with blue sapphires

RACHEL FEINSTEIN

Drawing on her rococo aesthetic, Feinstein's charm depicts a lady's profile in white gold and enamel

BARBARA KRUGER

A white gold coin with red enamel detailing plays on ideas of value and desire

CINDY SHERMAN

Symbolising fertility and femininity, this green gold egg contains photographs printed on ceramic, with a hidden steel magnet clasp

BEST CHARMS

'Charmed' bracelet, curated by Liz Swig, with Ippolita

Liz Swig of New York's LizWorks is the architect of unlikely artistic collaborations with beautifully unexpected results. 'Though a charm bracelet isn't unexpected in itself,' she explains, 'a bracelet featuring creations from seven female artists is.' Working solo, each artist had no idea what the others were creating, but the result is a 'diverse dialogue between the women who would live together on the wrist.' This jangling conversation is brought to life in precious materials by Italian jewellery brand Ippolita. ✪
